

Are you affected by the Disability Royal Commission and would like to receive counselling and support?

Relationships Australia WA offers free, independent counselling and support for Western Australians affected by the Royal Commission.

Who is this service for?

Counselling and support is available for people with disability, their families, friends, carers and support workers, and anyone affected by the Disability Royal Commission.

How can I access this service?

Request counselling or find out more information:

Phone: 6164 0180

Email: drc@relationshipsaustralia.org.au

Web: www.relationshipsaustralia.org.au/drc

Our service is available statewide across Western Australia. We can provide face to face, online and telephone counselling to people in metropolitan, regional, rural and remote locations. We also offer counselling via the Translating and Interpreting Service (TIS National).

Funded by the Australian Government Department of Social Services.

Note for screen reader users - a barcode appears here containing the RAWA website address, and we are aware that it is not visible to screen readers. The website address is www.relationshipsaustralia.org.au/drc

Counselling & Support for People Affected by the Disability Royal Commission

Screen Reader
Accessible

Relationships Australia.
WESTERN AUSTRALIA